The bill is expected to be similar to the House bill, which would set major rules for millions of people. ARI SHAPIRO, HOST: The Senate could vote on the revised health care bill as early as tomorrow. The bill is expected to be similar to the House bill, which would set major rules for millions of people. The Senate bill, called the Better Care Reconciliation Act, would repeal the individual mandate, which requires Americans to have health insurance or pay a fine. That's the element of the Affordable Care Act that most recently landed in the crosshairs of President Trump. NPR's Rob Stein reports on the roots of the bill that could be passed by the Senate. ROB STEIN, BYLINE: The Senate is expected to follow the House's lead in voting along party lines today. The Senate is likely to come back to vote on it after the presidential inauguration, possibly on Friday or Monday at the latest. Both chambers of Congress have to pass the bill by next Friday. (SOUNDBITE OF ARCHIVED RECORDING) GOV. JOHN KASICH: It's time. And just do what's right for the American people. STEIN: Ohio Gov. John Kasich has been an outspoken critic of the House plan. He has suggested that a full repeal of Obamacare, as he terms the Affordable Care Act, would be the best approach. (SOUNDBITE OF ARCHIVED RECORDING) KASICH: The Democrats stood
