Amine oxidase activity of vanilloid receptor-like 1 (TRPV1) and the possible interaction with capsaicin at the surface of heterologously expressed rat TRPV1. Vanilloid receptor-like 1 (TRPV1), a polymodal cation channel, is activated by capsaicin and is also highly sensitive to endogenous vanilloid ligands, such as anandamide. Recently, we reported that capsaicin activates TRPV1 by creating a ruthenium red-sensitive non-selective cationic conductance through channels in the plasma membrane. Capsaicin is a potent activator of the amine oxidase activity of TRPV1 and we hypothesized that amine oxidase activity might also contribute to the capsaicin-induced current. In our experiments we have challenged heterologously expressed rat TRP
