According to the game's producer, Andrew Messier, "It's a totally new way of thinking about the movement in the game. We're not just talking about running, jumping, or heading the ball; it's the entire body." HyperMotion Technology was created specifically to replicate the tight-turn movement of a player, and also to improve the animations of the player's moves. The game's lead producer, Ran Mairal, explained that "You now get those hilarious throws and moments where the player has made a different choice than you're expecting," adding, "We're trying to constantly improve the player's behaviour." FIFA 22 will also introduce an improved system for FIFA Ultimate Team matches that will make strategy players happy. "We've tried to make it smarter," said EA Sports' VP of Ultimate Team, Steve Matai. "It's something we've known we've wanted to do for a while." FIFA 22 will include "Dynamic Tactics" that will allow players to dynamically change tactics during the match, and will allow for new, game-changing moments for the matches. FIFA 22 will also be playable in "Dynamic Weather Conditions," which will play a role in changing the match's pace and will affect the flow of matches. EA Sports will announce the actual weather conditions used in FIFA 22 at E3 in June. FIFA Ultimate Team received a dramatic overhaul in FIFA 21 to improve its gameplay, and it's being expanded further in FIFA 22. FIFA 22 will introduce a "Revamped FIFA Ultimate Team," which includes season-long unlocks and a redesigned user interface. The player interface can now be used to browse and buy players and packs, or to follow the team to better identify players and packs. FIFA 22 will also improve the interface for playing matches, such as small pitch views, scoreboards, and more. The UI can also be enabled or disabled on the fly with the touch of a button. FIFA 22 will also introduce "Premium Players." These will include players with unique animation or goalscorer animations, or players that have joined a club in FIFA 22
