This menu can only be used to execute tasks directly related to USB security and nothing more. Its intended to keep things transparent and simple. Yet, the product's main issue is that the window is not persistent, so you'll need to open it every time you want to execute a specific action. Additionally, the product is only capable of restricting device access to specific USB ports, leaving the rest of the computer's ports accessible. This doesn't really make sense, because the application does restrict access to the ports that are actually being used. All other ports will still remain available to your computer, thus leaving them vulnerable. Furthermore, you cannot set the application to stay hidden in the system tray, leaving ports a little vulnerable. Additionally, there is no integrated option that lets you add it to startup items, so you have to run it every time you launch Windows. The overall design can't be seen in any way as professional.
