Graves' disease (GD) is the most common hyperthyroidism and is characterized by an ongoing inflammatory immune activation. The aim of our study was to evaluate whether the characteristics of thyroid-associated inflammation at diagnosis and the presence of pre-existent autoimmunity are predictive of spontaneous remission in newly diagnosed GD. GD patients were followed for at least 4years and divided according to presence or absence of complete (spontaneous) remission (CR) during follow-up. Characteristics of thyroid-associated inflammation at diagnosis and presence of pre-existent autoimmunity were evaluated in patients with GD who did or did not achieve CR. The study included 313 patients with GD; 162 patients achieved CR and 151 did not. Thyrotoxicosis occurred during follow-up in 24 patients and hyperthyroidism recurred in 22 patients, who were not excluded from the study. Mean C-reactive protein (CRP) levels were significantly higher in patients who achieved CR than in those who did not (p20mg/l (p=0.008) were independent predictors of spontaneous remission. Inflammatory activity is a critical factor in achieving spontaneous remission of GD. Spontaneous remission is more probable in patients with lower CRP at diagnosis.Q: Fixed size column for logs in syslog Is there an option to define a fixed size column for a syslog message. This is for a file log. We would like to know if we have been getting enough details, or if we should change certain variables in the coding. I have tried the variable loglevel but this would dictate the length of the message. Can anyone help? A: loglevel is what you're looking for. By default, rsyslog exposes it to syslogd, so it will appear as the "facility" in the syslog message. This is an archived article and the information in the article may be outdated. Dealer Rating: (2 reviews) "The car I bought was perfect and reliable....I have an oil leak in the gasket and the car will not start, but they still want money as they don't want to replace the seal." Avg. Dealer Rating: (2 reviews) "Dealer was great. Unfortunately, I didn't end up buying anything from them. Dealer had a 2012 M3 model with 16" wheels available and was asking $8500. But I already had a 2012 M3, so I decided to get the 2013 model instead and bought one for less than $7000. I still don't know why dealer would want to sell me a car instead of giving me a good deal."
