Build a space base. Grow food and construct defenses, smart defensive structures, add pick ups and upgrades. That's all in long long distant battles against an intelligent AI that will never give up. Choose your own strategy. Destroy your enemy and build your strong place of prosperity. Upgrade a fleet. Enable your ships and get the best out of your kill zone.

Upgrade your base. Improve the systems, build more drones, launch missiles and air blows.
Enjoy the action in space. Go up against the AI or battle hundreds of other players for the best matches of the week.

Key Features:

- Plan your own battles, using your own strategy against your opponent
- Choose to fight in one or two different modes, fighting against friend or against a AI robot
- Safely defeat your enemy
- Upgrade your fleet, system and army
- Build up your space station to defend your own and to conquer the whole planet
- Fight on board real ships where you really get the feeling how to really crush your enemy. Who is stronger will be up to you!
- Feel the safest feeling in the universe thanks to your own colonies, defences and rescue ships to protect them if needed
- Too much for an average game? No problem, choose to play with 16 or 32 players, where you fight as a team to conquer your enemies.

How does it work?

Player go first. Players may perform two actions: collect resources and construct structures. Building is triggered when the construction bar reaches full. On resource collection actions, players place a resource token on the board and consume one of them. On structures, players place a structure token and a resource token on the board. Two resources are consumed on one resource action (i.e. 1/2 of the resources available at that position are consumed). Reserve timeout: Players destroy the supplied structures at the end of every turn. Defensive tactics: players get defensive fortifications for free after a full defense queue is

Upgrade your bomber to take out as many flying threats as possible! Key Features: • Endless tactical battle action • Bomb the enemy into oblivion! • Match your skills against enemies from schoolboy to space brain! • More than 20 different endings to discover • Many hours of gameplay Rate Reviews @Modders2u "Amazing soundtrack to Bomber-Un... Overall it is an Ok game though and I still want to play it when I am not that busy in general. I have no problems with difficulty either for a shooter and I rarely have any problems with difficulty in general. The controls are very nice, aiming is spot on, no lag no free fire it just works good. Bombing is also a good way of killing enemies if you are up close to them." @hmm_mirabla "Played it on Mobile, on PC and it works really well. Controls are great and the difficulty is very balanced. Also you can play the campaign mode with up to three players on the same device which is cool. For anyone that likes these kind of games Bomber-Un is a must-have." @Modders2u "Played this game on PC and honestly I loved it. The gameplay is amazing. I really recommend this to anyone looking for a sweet shooter that's for sure. The only thing that I didn't like is that it is kinda short and there isn't much to it compared to the others available." "In this game you are in control of a powerful bomber that has immense firepower. Your mission is to destroy ground and air units and other air craft that are descending on earth. The terrain is also quite interesting, with various types of structures such as towers, aircraft carriers, and radar domes to bomb from, plus crashed AT-2s and SAMs to shoot up for fun. It's a very fun game, especially when there is a large army descending on you. The controls are quite good, although I found it hard to tell where the air units were at times." @0x0c0 c9d1549cdd ing High in America Steven Fredman In June 1995, America's Space Show was on a long hiatus. But fans made up for lost time, and two enormous anniversary parties, plus one more, brought them together at the George R. Brown Convention Center in Houston, Texas. This was the final event in the 40th Anniversary America's Space Show, but it might as well have been the first, as it would rejuvenate a beloved subculture. 1994 marked the midway point of the decade, one of the most important in the space race's 56-year history, and people were craving the 1960s-style space cadets and their barstools, earthbound humor, and patriotism. The new show began on June 13, with a party at the Discovery Green Hotel in downtown Houston. The last show in Houston got some of the earliest attendees, and for them it had something special: It was the first show in America in 1994, and future visiting satellite camps knew not to miss it. The opening show's six weekend days in July ran from noon to 11 p.m. day and night, including Thursday, Independence Day. Late on June 28, fans got their first glimpse of Houston-bred space cadet Nick Lippe, wearing a space suit and antenna as part of a group of young, untrained "anchor boys" who made a banner to hoist at the end of the show. The next two Fridays found judges twisting faces. Two trained cosmonauts flew with a stream of interviews, ground parties, and shows in venues around the city. In its final days, the show moved to Channel 13, home of the Discovery Channel, for a Sunday-night concert at the Astrodome that culminated with Hal Lindsey and the Holy Land Condor religious rock band assembling on two giant screens next to each other. Lindsey's wife, Sandy, had been one of the anchors in the Gulf Coast area until 1994, when she was laid off by a struggling network, and she was back in her hometown in the final show. This show culminated in the broadcast of the final frontier, something Texans had become used to: The final Frontier. Wherever the show was held, audiences were once again witnessing the celebration of human achievement. In the new format, that meant an early opening like 22,000 attendees at the Discovery Green show, with fifteen to twenty simultaneous radio stations broadcasting the show as a huge bounty of sound and excitement. The show featured guests from the Gemini era
