I want to do the following: add a new package to Emacs.el; start Emacs in use-package mode. This documentation, Installing Packages, says that: To include the package in your init file: (use-package MY-PACKAGE...) However, a little further up, the doc says: The package definition itself is simply added to your 'load-path', so that you can load it from your init file: (require 'MY-PACKAGE) I don't understand how to translate that last command into emacs-lisp code. Please help, thanks. A: You can put a file named package-alist (plural) into your init file. Then when you run (load 'package-name) It'll automatically get added to package-load-list. Early and late responses to endotoxin: dose effect in CD-1 mice. Adult CD-1 mice were studied for the influence of the dose of endotoxin (lipopolysaccharide, LPS) on T- and B-cell and macrophage activation, and on mortality (100, 12.5, or 1.3 mg/kg). Marked differential dose-related effects were found on weight gain, total white blood cell (WBC) number, T- and B-cell, and macrophage counts in the blood. Low and intermediate doses of LPS induced a transient WBC elevation followed by a drop to lower levels, T-cell activation, B-cell depression and hyperglobulinemia. At a higher dose, initial WBC elevation was less pronounced and transient T-cell activation was diminished. T-cell depression was most pronounced at 100 mg/kg and higher, as were B-cell and macrophage depression and mortality. LPS induced a specific depression of a B-cell

A: It's normal, the website remove this. You can use this code to catch the fetch request and then remove the right part : `loadHTML($output); $dom->getElementsByTagName('div')[1]->nodeValue = preg_replace('#\G#', '', trim($dom->getElementsByTagName('div')[1]->nodeValue)); echo $dom->saveHTML();` April Fools Prank Today has been dedicated as the April Fool's day by doing some of the crazy pranks. Showing the greatest of humor, a lot of people have been making fun of you by claiming you as their servant. Come on now, no one can be cool or cool while following a group of people who are doing tricks on others. Showing the low IQ of the designer of the site that you are following, they have been doing some of the craziest of events on your page. First, the link is not 100% open for you, forcing you to click, until a simple school kid that has posted on the site decides to make fun of you. Next, the original url was `www.notsure.us` in case you don't notice. It also has a humblebrag section as well as a crazy one. It doesn't seem like you can log in, but that doesn't mean you can't visit `www.notsure.us`. If you are confused, the other page also includes a link that says "`www.notsure.us`", just in case. But instead of getting laughed at or being banned, these April Fool's people really start working for you, and put some sweat on their brows. The effort made to get your money has been worth it. They remove all the ads from d0c515b9f4

Study: 5 common things an unfaithful spouse does It turns out cheating happens more often than you might think, and most people don't realize they're doing it until their spouse is already gone. If you've discovered your spouse is involved in an affair, you're not alone. According to a 2013 survey by the FBI and the National Institute of Justice, which took place among married men and women, one in five have cheated. Unfaithful spouses usually like to keep the relationship going, and that leads to a slew of problems, from financial stress to increased risk for domestic violence. Follow these tips to know if you're an unfaithful spouse yourself.

1. You're a preoccupied person If you can't keep a conversation going with your spouse, you're more likely to be unfaithful. It's not a surprise that a preoccupied, distracted spouse could have a fling. Neglecting your spouse because you're preoccupied with your own thoughts can lead to cheating. "Research has shown that people who are checking email every five minutes are 73 percent more likely to cheat on their partner," said Valerie Kammer, a counsellor in Vancouver and founder of Relationship Counseling and Education. "At the beginning of the relationship, it's simply a case of neglect. At the end, when I'm speaking to couples who've been together for 10, 15 years, they say they 'miss their best friend.'"
