

You can find the serial number for Adobe Acrobat or Adobe Reader Pro by using the following steps and by using the Google Chrome browser or FireFox browser. You can just ignore any software-related popup messages and install Adobe Acrobat or Adobe Reader Pro 9 Pro using the instructions you will read below. Run Acrobat, click Help and select Check for Updates . If new updates are available, download them, restart Acrobat and the next time you open Acrobat, click on Help and select Check for Updates . Follow the steps below. User Experience relies on two user experiences: one for end users and another for Adobe products. The system administrator should be responsible for creating both experiences. In the case of the end user experience, they should not have to do anything except install the application on their desktops. In the case of the Adobe products experience, the system administrator must set the configuration for it to work. The product can be started with either experience; however, only the end user experience should be able to start directly with the application. The installation should be completed in the Administration Console using the "Install Acrobat" button. The Administrator may wish to specify a specific location to be used for the volumes (this is optional). The following table lists the Registry values for the InstallApplication action. Each of these values determines the number and type of product interfaces that can be seen for selection by the user. Note that a value of 64 will only generate the first entry in the dialog if there is more than one interface. To generate a dialog for each interface you must set the Type to 0.
