Families toting smartphones have been raving about Infectonator, the arcade-style survival game. Popular enough to make it to the iPad and AndroidHaving experienced the worst of Microsoft's Xbox 360 problems, a group of computerphiles has devised a plan for destroying the console. The users of the Xbox 360 phoned a toll-free phone number, and paid for a special device which disables the console. The users can then phone the number again to re-enable the console. The device is available in the UK from £25. Because it's easy to forget to pay for it, the device costs £250. The costs are shared among the players of the game. If the console is permanently disabled, the money paid will be reimbursed to the users. If the users enjoy the game too much, they can simply phone again to re-enable the console, and pay nothing. The device is called 'Killswitch'
