We have been having fun with the new world order now for a couple of years. The U.S. was hit by a huge hurricane in 2005, New Orleans got flooded in one of the biggest natural disasters in recorded history, the United Kingdom seems to be coming down with a cough, and France had its natural disaster of the year. Meanwhile, Russia has been shooting, Russia has been shooting all the time, and the U.S. is shooting too. It's not over yet. Look, I am not for any moment suggesting that Russia is worse than the U.S., or even France, or the U.K., or even the hurricane-hit states of the USA, but it is seriously worrying when suddenly all of these things happen. Someone is clearly trying to tell us something. Therefore, I would like to translate this message: From far away, you cannot believe what is going on. It's also better not to know, and thus you better not think about it. Only remain calm, and be ready for anything. In these moments, it is not because we "missed a memo", or "lost a message", or even "were somehow left behind". It is not because we have now somehow turned into crazy people, or "lapsed into a collective coma". No, it is because the entire world is changing very fast. It is to be expected that this will catch us off guard in moments like these. That's why we should accept it, and prepare ourselves accordingly. Just for the sake of argument, let's say that the next couple of days are when some of our societies break down into anarchy. I will make this a strong statement: It will not be because of a "global-economic-crisis", or because we lost our job, or because some bank went belly-up, or even because a few people lost their real estate and investments. The reason for this breakdown would not necessarily be because we missed a memo, or because someone somehow thought it was c9d1549cdd

À propos de l'auteur Thomas Bracke is a freelance game designer, writer and musician. He's best known for his beautiful and dark gothic games "Mute" and "Darklight". Since 2005 he's served as a creative consultant for several indie developers, providing his expertise and creative ideas for his own games, and doing the same for various other indie games. In addition to his work as a consultant, Thomas is an active indie game designer, having already launched three games for PC. In 2015 he will launch his fourth indie game for PC, "Hollow". This game is heavily inspired by a classic Konami horror game from the 90s, "The Lost Stars". Thomas is also working on a mystery series called "Unconfirmed Presents", which he started in 2018. The first installment is a literary thriller and was released in September 2018. The second installment will be a detective game, and will start at the end of 2020. Finally, Thomas is currently exploring his new love for webcomics. What's New
