and Raccoon Once again, don't you think you've seen this outfit before? Describing my nostalgia is probably the most troublesome thing I can do. In fact, even for myself it's problematic, but that might have something to do with a huge nostalgia barrier I had to overcome to try something new - something drastically different than what I had done or plan to do in the future. As a result, I find the term "nostalgia" to be so useless. There are people who can say that they do not feel nostalgia at all and those who can say they feel nostalgic daily every single moment of their lives. I am the former - I'm the hardcore type of person who refuses to address that vague feeling. I don't necessarily enjoy the memory. If I miss something, it means I wanted to change that thing or I was happy about that thing. It's not that I expected that I'll miss the past, but you know, I still expected how things have turned out in the end. I know I'll never miss the past for the same reason that you probably won't miss things about your second hand car, you will never miss a car that you've acquired more than 10 years ago. Mostly because it's unfeasible to return to that car. A lot of things become just 'past' in my life now. I'm okay with that. I guess I'm a bit of a paradox. I'm a sad person in some ways, crying about lost memories and people or about how I grew to be this person. All the desires of my past are tied up in my self-image and now they've turned against me. Sometimes, I know I'm behaving like a crazy person, crying about sadness and desires of my past - but I don't believe in the notion of time anymore. I believe in convenience, in 'never have to worry about anyone ever', and sometimes, I think those people who cry over my tears are right. I need to look for meaning in my past. When I'm not crying about lost memories, I get scared. I get scared of my past. This is my second time wearing this bunny costume, you see. My first version is long out of existence, and the white hair is not white at all when there are red streaks, too. I mean, I don't know where it goes or why I decided to wear this stuff; but I came to this costume, and I was so happy about that. It was 100 Hidden Birds is a cartoon-style hidden object game, in which you'll catch cunning birds by clicking the screen. You'll be transported to a city where you'll find dozens of birds that hide in the walls of buildings and behind the panels of street signs. The gameplay is similar to the one of European developers - clicking on the scene, you'll bring the picture to life and there's plenty of hidden objects on it. Examine each picture carefully and look for objects - hidden birds and their feathers. Gather feathers to complete the game as soon as possible. Each level gets tougher - there's a time limit at your disposal. If you collect feathers but miss the birds, you'll have to start the level again. Sometimes, you'll be given a hint with a question - "What is the name of the building where the birds hide?" You have to correctly answer the question to get rid of the hint and get to the next level. Collecting feathers and finding birds is easy. You just need to look for them and click on their names on the picture. Prepare to be stumped! Take care of your nerves! This game is difficult but not too hard. In order to complete a level you need to click on the birds and collect their feathers. The harder the level, the more feathers you'll get! Your success in collecting the feathers is the key to completing the game. You have to look carefully and collect each feather with care and precision. Make sure to complete all birds on a level as soon as possible. You don't have to look at the picture - you can watch it live. You'll have to be fast in collecting each feather and find all the birds on the level. Where to find 100 Hidden Birds? You start the game at the stadium. There are more than 100 birds to find. The stadium has plenty of hiding birds inside the stands. Birds will hide in many places: inside objects, behind the picture, and on each level in every picture. You'll have to collect a feather and find the birds - it is your mission. You'll have to find them in different buildings in every level. Make sure you don't miss a single bird that hides on the picture. Press the space bar

- Bumping to get the download
- Use `extract_cab` to bring everything out of the install package
- File Converter to convert the `BLUT.EXE` and the `PLUT.EXE` to make the `.INF` and the `.LABS`
- This is also used as replacement of `DVDFab`.
- To install the external `.INF` files to the "Program Files" directory use `xcopy` (fairly good for in batches like for example 100 installs)
- For example: `xcopy*.EXE "c:\Program Files" /E /I`
- Paste the `MOVIES.INF` to the drive that has the game installed on it.
 - Eg. `C:\STARTUP\MOVIES.INF`
 - Make sure you have the drive letter correct. If not then edit the `INF_CNF.INI` file
 - This will copy the `MOVIES.INF` into the "Software\Games\A New Beginning" directory and Auto-Run the game
