Q: How to get all possible combinations from a list of items in C# I am looking to get all possible combinations of items from a List. Each item in the List is unique. I am using C# and LINQ. Basically, I have a List of objects that I am adding them to each other. I then want to obtain all possible combinations of these items. I have figured out how to get them back to back but I am at a bit of a loss as to how to obtain the combinations of the combinations. The following is what I have written so far: public List Combine(List points) { List copy = new List(); copy.AddRange(points); return copy; } This gives me the input list back to back. I am then using LINQ to try and get the combinations of these items in the list: var newPoints = new List(); var newPoints2 = newPoints.Aggregate(newPoints, (current, p) => current.Inter 0cc13bf012
