microwave: Brønsted acid promoted desulfonation of polysulfonated quaternary ammonium salts. A synergistic process is demonstrated to convert the formation of polysulfonated quaternary ammonium salts (QASs) to the corresponding amines via the formation of sulfonyl bromides. The optimization of reaction conditions was done using water and ethanol as solvents. It was shown that acid/base catalysis is important, and the presence of water is critical for the reaction to take place. The presence of a co-solvent promotes
