These items are allocated as subviews of a UITableViewCell. Because these items are allocated on the right side, I thought it would be useful to have the UITableView display a green rectangle on the left side of the cell to indicate that the item being shown is active. When the item is created, I alloc and init the view controller (a UIViewController subclass) with an instance of the UITableViewCell subclass. When I create the UITableViewCell in cellForRowAtIndexPath and add it as a subview of the UITableViewCell, none of the subviews appear to show up on the screen when I run the app in the simulator. The screen displays only the UITableViewCell. Why aren't the subviews showing up? UITableViewCell subclass: @interface Section2_Cells : UITableViewCell @property (nonatomic, strong)UIView *leftView; @property (nonatomic, strong)UIView *rightView; -(UIView *)layout; @end Here is the relevant portion of the UITableViewCell implementation file: -(UIView *)layout { //the left view self.leftView = [[UIView alloc] initWithFrame:CGRectMake(0,0,200,500)]; self.leftView.backgroundColor = [UIColor greenColor]; //the right view self.rightView = [[UIView
