Firedropper allows you to easily dump data to a local or remote syslog server. It is designed to be used in large networks, handling the high volume of messages typical of networks. Firedropper works by listening for the messages produced by other applications. When it detects a message, it copies it to its own syslog log file. All messages are timestamped with the message-sending application's time-of-day. Not your typical, one-trick pony mail store. So...
