The Valley is a single player, deathmatch game that takes place in a spider infested valley. You have limited time to survive as many spiders as possible, collecting weapons and ammunition along the way. You're not fighting them, you're fighting your own fear of spiders and you're going to die. The game starts as a normal, everyday situation. You get out of your truck, turn around to see hundreds of spiders dropping on the ground from the sky. It's a terrifying sight! Here you have to survive as long as you can, figuring out how to defeat each level of spiders. They're pouring out from the sky and you're in trouble. You'll need to collect weapons and ammunition to help you out, to stay alive. But the problem is that every level of spider can be killed with a single shot. Death is guaranteed, there's not much you can do about it. So the idea behind The Valley is to survive as long as you can. How to Play You'll face a new level of spiders every 3 seconds. The more you kill, the more you'll be able to choose the weapons you have collected. There are 6 different weapons to choose from (Ball and Chain, Desert Eagle, Grenade, Rocket Launcher, Shotgun and Sniper Rifle) each with their own advantages and disadvantages. You can kill as many spiders as you want, but there's a catch: every time you kill an spider a spider will be born in its place. As long as you survive the first level of the game, you'll be able to respawn when you die so you can kill as many spiders as you can. The game is played with a standard keyboard, as well as a gamepad. You can also control the game using your Oculus Touch or Google VR controllers, with an Xbox One controller and the Vive controllers also supported. Regions Edit The Valley has 4 regions: The "Dark" region has a deadly drop every 20 seconds of level 3 spiders and level 4 has a deadly drop every 5 seconds of level 4 spiders. The "Bus" region has a deadly drop every 15 seconds of level 3 spiders and level 4 has a deadly drop every 5 seconds of level 4 spiders. The "Nuclear" region has a deadly drop every 2 seconds of level 3 spiders and level 4 has a deadly drop every 7 seconds of level 4 spiders. The "Tiny" region has a deadly drop every 15 seconds of level 3 spiders and

In 2012 Norfolk Southern celebrated its 30th anniversary and honoured some of the railroads in its history by repainting 20 locomotives in 'fallen flag' liveries. Since the 1820s, hundreds of railroad companies were built, merged, reorganised and consolidated into what eventually became Norfolk Southern in 1982. Each livery was modified to fit the GE ES44AC and EMD SD70ACe, while staying as true as possible to the original designs. The heritage liveried locomotives were unveiled in July 2012 and are rostered in NS' daily freight timetables. The General Electric ES44AC featured in this Heritage Pack was the first AC locomotive class purchased by NS and are regularly used to haul long coal trains. The locomotive is part of GE's Evolution Series, which means it produces fewer emissions than its competitors but still maintains a mammoth 4,400 horsepower and 75mph top speed. The 'fallen flag' liveries featured in this Heritage Pack are: Conrail Central of Georgia Railway Interstate Railroad Lehigh Valley Railroad Monongahela Railway Nickel Plate Road Norfolk and Western Railway Norfolk Southern Railway Pennsylvania Railroad Southern Railway Also included are Hopper Ballast Wagons, Van Autoparts Boxcars and Hopper Low Sided Gondolas, along with four Quick Drive consists for each locomotive and a selection of double header consists. Each locomotive in this Pack is Quick Drive compatible, giving you the freedom to drive the ES44AC on any Quick Drive enabled route for Train Simulator, such as those available through Steam. Please note, there are no scenarios included with this Pack.

is a 1972 samurai film directed by Kenji Misumi. The movie is based on the ten volumes of the manga Kurozuka, written by Kunio Katō, which tells the story of a samurai named Otsugi, who is ordered to protect a Shinto shrine at night. The following morning he discovers it has been robbed and destroyed, leaving only traces. His search leads him to the residence of the shamisen player Shiba, and the film loosely follows the sequence of events that transpire between them. According to Misumi, it was his intention to convey an atmosphere of simplicity as the story is a simplification of the manga. The film was an international co-production between Japan, Taiwan and Italy, and released within Japan on December 9, 1972. The first theatrical release outside Japan was the 1989 anime television series Fox wa Kōbōshi Dattara starring Raizo Kishibe, which was an animated version of the manga Kurozuka. The film gained a cult following in Japan and has since gained a reputation of being one of Misumi's best works. Plot In a remote town, the Shogunate rules Japan, while the rebels of the latter half of the Edo period work towards ending the shogunate and calling for a popular government. A new toy called Kubi, where spring comes from a bow and arrow weapon resembling those used in feudal Japan, is causing popular reception. Production is banned throughout Japan due to the use of the weapon, but nonetheless people are abusing the right to make and own them. An Ojiisan craftsman is trying to profit from the ban while enriching his pocket with these weapons despite the Shogunate's wishes. They are secretly sold to a young man named Ichijō, who uses them, and a young boy sees him do it and follows him. The boy's parents are arrested for theft, and on the day of their execution he is placed in Ichijō's custody. The gang are gathered together in the capital during an imperial visit. After being separated from each other, the boy is adopted into the Yamada household and begins training with Ichijō to become a great warrior. In the town surrounding the shrine Otsugi is hired as a watchman by a man named Fujiwara, who places into his hands a kata made from a short sword and a skull disc. During the following night, Otsugi finds the bow, has a vision of Mitsu, and the next

The Huntsville Fire and Rescue Department is warning the public of a worker illegally managing and poisoning a deer herd to fatten them for slaughter. Officials say Tyler McLendon, 31, of Pickens County in south-central Georgia, said he had been "tinkering" for a while, to kill and salvage the meat. In an interview with 24 On 6 On Your Side's Steve Gray, McLendon said he started out killing deer with .410 pellet ammunition, but found out it was near impossible to kill a large buck after just one shot. As word spread about his efforts, he needed a closer kill to get bigger animal. He moved to the "next best thing" and started using hollow point bullets. He said he needed a "perfect" shot to kill and skin a deer like he is now butchering. In recent posts on Facebook and Instagram, McLendon showcased his amateur butchering skills, in which he said a recent deer harvest turned out great. Click to resize McLendon said he is not a hunter, he is an "educated reclamation specialist," who said
