program therefor, and more particularly, to a technique of displaying a cursor at a desired position by moving a pointer displayed on a display surface. 2. Description of the Related Art A computer is provided with a variety of peripheral equipment, including a monitor for displaying a screen, a keyboard, a pointing device such as a mouse, and the like. In a case where an application program such as a spreadsheet is used, an input command to the application program, such as a click of the mouse and a scrolling movement of a cursor, is indispensable. As a means for designating a position on a display screen, a method of reproducing a mouse button as a click of the mouse, a method of reproducing a scrolling movement of a mouse pointer in the vertical or horizontal direction, and the like are commonly used. By reproducing a click of the mouse as a click of the mouse button of the mouse, such a click is recorded and displayed on the screen. Further, by reproducing a scrolling movement of a mouse pointer, such a movement is recorded and displayed on the screen. A screen display method using such a mouse has become popular in recent years. That is, a representative example of this screen display method is a so-called standard mode, which is a mode capable of automatically scrolling a screen as an application program or a Web browser displays a screen. By designating a position of a mouse pointer on the standard mode screen, a user can perform an input operation to a browser as an application program, or can open an address or a link in the browser. Further, an operation (such as an input operation) can be performed by using a mouse pointer on a display screen on which a moving image or the like
