It's created on navigation bar with height of 0.0 and it's in the navigation bar. The bottom of view is right on the navigation bar. The funny thing is, the view height is 8.0. View is of 0.0 height. It is very little. But it covers navigation bar (it's red border is visible). If i remove this view from navigation bar, i've got my view back. How can i remove this red view from navigation bar? Or how can i remove it from navigation controller?? I've just created a new project and i've got the same view, but not in navigation controller. A: Check the height of the subviews of your UINavigationController. I've just created a test app with your details and it looks like the height of the one shown below is 8.0: Then, check the point that I'll make in a moment; you probably have a view that's taller than 8.0 and probably a subview of this view that's also taller than 8.0. Finally, close the storyboard. Usually, one of the first things you do when you're stuck with a problem like this is to delete your storyboard, but don't do that yet. When you delete it, you'll create a new one and the red view will reappear. Instead, click the x in the storyboard and select "Close". The point is, if the height of your red view is 8.0, then there's a view that's in the view hierarchy of your navigation controller that's taller than 8.0. You can find out what's beneath it in the
