When running DirectX 9.0c on Windows Vista, you must ensure that the Direct3D 9.0c Framework Checker (D3DCompiler_47.dll) or the Direct3D 9.0c Driver (d3d9.dll) is up-to-date. The D3DCompiler_47.dll and d3d9.dll files are required and used by the Direct3D 9.0c runtime. In most cases, these DLLs are installed along with DirectX 9.0c on Windows Vista. You can download these updated DLLs via the DirectX SDK. To install the DirectX Game Development Runtime, you may also need to download the DirectX Game Development Runtime redistributable packages for your target Windows platform. See the DirectX Game Development Runtime download page for details. When you install the DirectX Game Development Runtime redistributable packages, they should automatically update the DirectX Game Development Runtime listed in the Add/Remove Programs panel. You can also download DirectX Game Development Runtime separately. Most of the time this package is successfully installed with the directx_Jun2010_redist.exe runtime error, all you need to do is to reinstall and/or repair the Microsoft DirectX Game Development Runtime as the Directx_Jun2010_redist.exe runtime error will be resolved automatically. On rare occasions, if the Directx_Jun2010_redist.exe runtime error doesn't go away after a suitable number of attempts to re-install or repair, you can then install a fresh copy of the Microsoft DirectX Game Development Runtime redistributable package and install the DirectX Game Development Runtime. This is the preferred method to fix the DirectX_Jun2010_redist.exe runtime error problem. 5ec8ef588b
