At present, the Center for the study of Religion has about 65 staff members, more than 1,000 students and a budget of US$1 million. A major part of the center's research is done at the University of Chicago by faculty members and their graduate and doctoral students from other universities. This includes research on the text of the Qur'an and issues of Islam, as well as investigation into those aspects of Islamic law which come down to this university. The center has set up a website that provides quick answers to people's questions on Islam, including the Qur'an, the Hadith, the Sunnah, the ritual law and Islamic history. These Islamic basics are now being promoted by a team of professors and graduate and undergraduate students at the University of Chicago. Of particular interest in this connection are study of the influence of political unrest, on the development of the Islamic tradition. It has to be declared that Quran has given a great solution to all problems and if Quranic sense is understood then there is no doubt that unity will prevail, unity is the source and strength of faith and Islam. its just a question of pure understanding the message of unites in Quran and the Islamic faith. I know of a simple book that is used by my own students. It's called Prajashya's pravachana that's just an old book of the Brahma-sutras, the basic text of Vedanta. It's only one. But it's a simple book that explains basic concepts and their relationship to each other and without any of the author's "spiritual notes" or anything, the student only needs it to understand the basics of the topic and learn the lesson inside it. It has no pictures or diagrams, but it's full of text, and the basics of all material concepts. 5ec8ef588b
