9. this is how it is evident to us that the books written by the apostles and handed on to us are sacred, authoritative and reliable, so that through faith in them, like the sacred scriptures, we may be able to know and believe the things contained therein (see 2 tim. 3:15-17). 10. in addition to this, we must obey the teachings we have received in the sacred books which we have just mentioned. we must preserve these things as long as we live, and we must preach them to others. just as we have learned what is good and true, we must hand on to others what we have learned. for this we must watch carefully that no one corrupts what we have received. but if anyone does corrupt, then let him be made known to us so that we may deal with it. if anyone teaches another doctrine and does not acknowledge him as a heretic, then that person is fully aware that he is teaching a different doctrine and is arousing division in the church. so we must not tolerate any kind of division in the church, but must warn each other so that we may never be condemned by the bishop. for you know how large our own number is, and you know how difficult it is to find men who know how to obey all of you, and how many there are who teach in this way, which is contrary to the teaching of the apostles. for this reason we must stand firm and must not accept or allow anyone to teach the brothers or sisters a doctrine which is contrary to the one taught by the apostles. for if there is any disagreement among you, why do you not resolve it? after reading the first few paragraphs, the next section, the next section, the last few paragraphs, the reader has learned much more about the text. she has learned to read the text in an open way, has begun to immerse herself in the text and to absorb it and live it. she has learned to situate herself in the text and to make a connection with the text. she has begun to understand and to communicate what she has learned.
