Bezier3D is a free software to convert any gif files to bezier curves. Bezier3D supports RGB color, all the control points have control and user can also control the interpolation of the curve to make it "smooth" or "fattier". To bezier3d you just have to click the "Load" button, select your.gif image and then choose the shape that you want to convert. You can also define the line width, line color and line type for the new line that Bezier3D will produce. After selecting the parameters you want Bezier3D to use you click the "Save" button. You can select your gif image that you want to convert in the "Input image" window. If you want to change your input image you have to click on the "New" button and select the image from your folder. After clicking on the "Save" button, the program will start to generate the converted gif image. Just select your output gif image in the "Output image" window and click the "Start" button. After clicking the "Start" button Bezier3D will start to convert your gif image to a bezier curve. The output image that Bezier3D produces is saved in your documents folder. When the conversion is complete you can enjoy the new animated gif image with your friends, you can share it with your family or you can use it in your web pages. Bezier3D Features: Controls and tools Bezier3D has all the features that are needed to change the curve of the gif image. Bezier3D has a color wheel for specifying the RGB value of each control point and a line tool to change the width, color and type of the line that you want to produce. User Interface Bezier3D can be used as a standalone software with a main window where you can see the result of your conversion and a sub window where you can control the control points. Conversion Bezier3D supports RGB color with all the control points having control. The tool will interpolate your curves between the control points you select.
