The tricky part is that it needs to divide the dataframe into two vectors first, then append the two vectors to one new vector. So far I have this, but it only divides the dataframe into two vectors and appends them to a new vector: `import pandas as pd import numpy as np # Original dataframe df = pd.DataFrame({'first': ['text1', 'text2', 'text3'], 'second': ['text4', 'text5', 'text6'], 'third': [1, 2, 3], 'fourth': [4, 5, 6]}) # Vector to split into halves df.groupby(['first', 'second']).apply(list).values.tolist() A: In [135]: (df.assign(flag=df.iloc[:, -1].notnull().cumsum()): .groupby(['first', 'second', 'flag'])['first', 'second']: .apply(list): .tolist()) Out[135]: [['text1',`
