A group of soldiers who had been serving in the same army unit as the accused before his arrest allegedly named him over a drink at their post a few days before the rape, police have alleged. The rape survivor has alleged that the soldier made "rude" remarks before claiming that he has "sexually harassed" her for the past three years, and that she was forced to marry him. She has pleaded with the media to "respect" her identity and the "victimhood" of herself, as she makes her first public appearance since the incident. The 25-year-old woman has said in the court that she was raped by the accused, who was posted on the same base as the survivor at the time. She has claimed that she was overpowered by him, and that he threatened that if she said anything about the incident, he would give her brother a "bad accident". On the night of the incident, she had been drinking alcohol as was her practice. She has said that the accused had joined her and some other soldiers in a bar. The woman claimed she was "chased" by the accused to a secluded spot on the military base where he "suddenly" forced himself on her. She said she fought back, but that the accused overpowered her and raped her. She said that after the incident, she returned to her base and told the soldiers that "he had forced himself on me and that I was asking for justice". She added that the accused also tried to rape the next morning, but she escaped. The woman has claimed that she was then forced to marry him by officials. Meanwhile, the Indian Army has suspended the case officer of the accused in the case, and transferred him to another camp. The lady officer of the accused is being probed by her own superior in the case. The Army has further suspended the accused officer from the post on charges of non-cooperation. The court on Wednesday submitted the matter to the Army Legal
